The Office of the Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management in conjunction with the Office of Institutional Research conduct a campus review process to first, identify all courses which are deemed “flagged.” According to UNC system policy, a “flagged” course is defined as having 25% or greater enrollment of student-athletes. Institutional Research generates the “flagged” report according to official census course enrollment statistics. Athletes who are enrolled in courses with fewer than 4 students are not counted as irregular because no statistically significant results can be derived from such a small sample. At the end of the semester when grades are available a t-test is performed to look for statistically significant differences in course grades between athletes and non-athletes in “flagged” courses. Additional t-tests are run to compare grades in all “flagged” sections of a course with “non-flagged” sections. If t-test results indicate that student-athletes mean grades were statistically different than non-student-athletes, this would be considered an irregularity. Likewise, an irregularity would exist if results indicated that mean grades in “flagged” courses were statistically different than those in “non-flagged courses.” Finally, another form of irregularity would be if an individual student-athlete is enrolled in three or more “flagged” sections per academic year. If an irregularity is identified, this information is shared with the Director of Athletics and the Faculty Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics (FCIA) for further evaluation and justification.
